SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENTS

AUSTRALIAN LEAD TRADE
GERMAN INFLUENCE DESTROYED
LOCAL SMELTING AND REFINING
SALES DIRECT TO CONSUMERS
BY G.M.

Has German influence dominated the base metal trade in Australia since the war began? The people out of ten would answer the question in the affirmative. They would be right, nevertheless, until a concrete case is exposed, and then they would be convinced that their belief was correct. Yet a moment's consideration of one aspect alone of the case will show that such a belief is baseless.

Since the outbreak of war no metals have been allowed to be exported from Australia without the permission of the Federal Government. In such a case, when the Attorney-General is applied to for permission to export

NOW READY

BRITISH AND AUSTRALIAN SUPERVISION
Except for some shipments of lead to the East for the Russian Government and others, and other shipments of copper and zinc concentrates to America and France, the whole of Australia's base metal production has gone to England. Prior to arrival of the metal here, the British Government has been advised of the quantity, the ship, and the consignee, and it may be accepted that the British Government closely watches the noted courtesy of the Federal Government here, and the watchful eye of the British Government at the other end, the opportunity for enemy sympathisers to get busy is practically nil. Not only that, but nearly all freight shipments have to be made with the Navy Department, as it controls almost every steamer leaving Australia. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the enemy has not benefited by a single ounce of Australasia has been since the war began, and the supervision of the Federal and British Governments has guaranteed the exclusion of German influence.

It is true that the Federal Attorney-General recently complained that the British Government sympathised with Germany.

the selling of these firms, even although the Attorney-General himself approved of such sale, and knew in a number of cases that the shipments were for the British Government.
 The Australian producers replied that as it was obviously the wish of the Federal Government that they should not deal with these London firms, they had instructed their London offices to decline to permit such firms in any way to handle Australian metals. No one in Australia seems to know why the British Government appears to prefer to employ these semi-German firms in London in preference to undoubtedly British firms.

SECRET OF GERMAN DOMINANCE

It will surprise some people to learn that public controversy, important sections and out their businesses on lines that rendered it impossible for the Germans ever again to et in a position of dominance. Before the war the Germans had dominated the Australian metal trade in commerce with the world's metal trade. This dominance was inherently secured in one of two ways, viz:-

1. By securing that the final treatment of the metal to bring it into its commercial form was in German hands.
2. By controlling the marketing of all metals in their commercial form.

Big money was made in the trade, and many Australian companies were induced to accede to the German policy of making their outputs in a semi-finished condition,
 leaving to the Germans the final treatment of the product. Long before the war the German metal interests pushed the Eventually a great co-partnership agreement was arrived at. A new co-operative company, known as Broken Hill Associates (Smelters') Proprietary, Limited, was formed to purchase the Port Pirie smelter works, and the two greatest mines at Broken Hill agreed for 50 years to hand the whole of their output to the Port Pirie works for smelting and refining in Australia. The realization of the refined metals was left to the hands of the new co-operative company, and the three partners designed the new organization to completely appreciate the need of emancipating Australia from German dominance, and with this knowledge of the secret of the German

3. The Smelting Company to extend the present facilities for lead smelting and refining, and also the zinc smelting facilities at Port Pirie.
4. The Smelting Company to engage in manufacturing from the metals it produces and in the treatment of by-products.
5. The sale of all refined metals to be conducted by a special branch of the company in London, which shall sell direct to consumers.

WELCOME FROM BRITISH CONSUMERS.

As soon as Associated Smelters, Ltd., secured control of the companies in May last, it was given the London agency for the sale of refined metals, and it is a pleasure to do business with any firm unconnected with German interests, and to take orders from British consumers.

THANKS to all kind relatives, friends, letters, and floral tributes.

It is gratifying to know that the company has received consent of letters from British consumers, who are now commencing to enter into direct supply, and consequently, to undertake the responsibility of marketing to purchase their requirements from the company. Contracts already made for quantities of tinplate are being cancelled, and negotiations pending show clearly that the company will have no need to sell the whole of its output of tinplate to the tinplate mills in Great Britain.

Not the least advantage of this arrangement is the increased employment of labour in Australia that will be given in the mining, smelting, and handling of the metals. In welding, and handling of the tinplate, and in the tin times production of the tinplate, the company has a market limit of 100,000 tons per annum, and is now in a position to supply the requirements of the tinplate mills in Australia will produce heretofore for the tinplate mills in Australia, and will produce in Australia for the tinplate mills in Australia, and will produce in Australia for the tinplate mills in Australia.

merits of the proposed amendments to the Constitution. Experience to the metals, smelters, and refiners is other parts of the world.

To a few far-sighted Australians it has been the credit of having torn out the Gove-Isaacs line from the lead trade in Australia. They've also got some 750,000, and more would be found for extensions, some of which are in hand, and others projected. It has been secured that for the next 30 years the broken Hill lead trade—from the time the creek is put into it until the company is taken over on the metal, shall be controlled exclusively by Australian interests. That is, the lines upon which the Australian Government has indicated had arranged to be taken over. Hughes made the metal position in relation to connecting the Hill interests.

The Macedon is a sister ship to the Howard Smith steamer Chronos, which is at Newcastle on her maiden voyage. The Macedon was built by Hamilton and Co., Ltd., of Port Glasgow. Her principal dimensions are—Length 140 ft.; beam 26 ft.; draught 10 ft.; gross tonnage 2,500 tons; net tonnage 1,500 tons. She will carry 400 tons on a depth of 10 ft. The vessel is fitted with 16 stoves, 10 five-ton derricks, eight three-ton, and one heavy davit, which will enable her to handle 100 tons of cargo. She will probably be fitted with a wireless telegraph.
